Dear Chairman Wilson and Compact Commissioners,

I'd like to thank all of you for your extensive work and for the time that you're putting in as Compact Commissioners.

At the June 29th meeting, all 11 applications for importation of radioactive waste were approved. The allocations used up nearly 98% of the curie limit allocated for the first year.

By curies, it appears that 93% of the waste approved so far is from utilities and their nuclear reactors.

SEED Coalition requested information well before the last Compact Commission meeting on how prioritization of applications would occur and on what basis allocations would be determined, especially since more allocations were requested than are allowed for the first year. No such policy discussion was held publicly before allocations were determined or since then. SEED Coalition asks that you still set a policy and clarify how future allocations decisions will be made.

On June 29th approvals gave 10 out of 11 applicants the exact volume and curie amounts recommended by Waste Control Specialists in their June 10, 2012 comments (page 4), and the last allocation was not far off.

We hope the Compact Commission will take the reins and discuss application prioritization policy publicly, allowing for comment. Unfortunately, the appearance now is that the Commission has developed a de facto policy of "Whatever WCS Wants," and this calls into question the ability of the Commission to make independent decisions, a situation that we hope you will remedy.

Protection of public health, safety and welfare is an important part of your charge as the Compact Commission.

SEED Coalition has raised some very significant health and safety issues in our written and oral comments over the past few months, and over several years for that matter.

Commissioners have assured us that they have read our comments, which we appreciate, but again request written responses and thorough Compact Commission discussion of the crucial issues our organization and others have raised.

Prime among our concerns is the presence of water at the WCS site and the risk of contaminating aquifers. Monitoring wells in the area of the Compact disposal site still show water and it was recently reported that 18 months of pumping may be needed. We urge you to get the actual data and reports regarding these wells and water levels, ask questions of WCS and TCEQ and not settle for cursory feel-good statements to the effect that "we're watching this."

We had hoped that the transportation issue would be on the Compact Commission agenda today. Since its not, we ask that you arrange an in-depth special session or workshop in the very near future, perhaps jointly with the Department of State Health Services and the U.S. Department of Transportation Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration and Hazmat Enforcement representatives.

We all hope accidents will never occur, the fact is that sometimes they do. The number of trucks bound for Texas is about to increase significantly and routing is a crucial public safety consideration. Texans should not be put at risk.

Low-Level radioactive waste routes appear to be required by federal law since Texas is the host state, but the designations have not occurred. Quick Compact Commission action is needed since shipments of waste, including highly radioactive materials from nuclear reactors, are likely to be moving to Texas soon and down our highways. It matters where they go. Highly populated areas and dangerous stretches of highway should be avoided.

We asked at the June 29th meeting that the Compact Commission make approvals for imports conditional, in that no shipments be permitted until radioactive waste routes are established and legal requirements to do so in Texas are met. This has not occurred, nor has there been any Compact Commission recommendation that the Department of State Health Services or other agency take action.

Waiting to address transportation routes or to ensure that they are designated may result in shipments of radioactive waste traveling on our highways before routes have been determined and would constitute a failure to fulfilling the Compact Commission charge to protect public health, safety and welfare.

A spreadsheet of hazardous materials routes from the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration is online at their website, <http://www.fmcsa.dot.gov/safety-security/hazmat/national-hazmat-Route.aspx>

Texas does have routes for all non-radioactive hazardous materials – labeled as “A”.

However, Texas has no designated routes for radioactive waste - which would be labeled “P” in Columns L to P. There are 12 states that do have designated radioactive waste routes: Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Delaware, Iowa, Kentucky, New Mexico, Ohio, Tennessee, Utah, and Virginia.

Texas also has no restricted routes for radioactive waste - which would be labeled Class 7 in Columns A – K. The states of Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, and Virginia have designated restricted routes. These designations and restrictions have been highlighted on the chart, which was updated in 2008.

Vermont, a Compact State that will be shipping waste to Texas, is shown as currently having no designated hazardous materials routes at all. Likewise, Connecticut, Hawaii, Maine, Mississippi, Missouri, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Carolina, North Dakota, South Carolina, South Dakota, Wisconsin appear to have no hazardous materials routes.

States can designate radioactive waste routes as long as they comply with federal standards. Citations for legal requirements for designating routes have been provided in SEED Coalition’s previous comments that were submitted on behalf of our organization, and other organizations and individuals.

Again, SEED Coalition asks that you ensure that radioactive transportation routes be put in place before shipments of radioactive waste come into Texas from nuclear reactors from around the country.

Please designate adequate time as soon as possible to thoroughly discuss and hear from technical resource people and the public regarding transportation routing, emergency preparedness concerns, water levels in wells at the site, water contamination risks and allowing adequate capacity at the site for waste from Texas and Vermont, the Compact States. Your role is crucial in protecting the public. Please insist on obtaining real data and full information that comes from a variety of sources, including the public, and utilize this information in making Compact Commission decisions.

Sincerely,

Karen Hadden
SEED Coalition
